What we do

STICK exists to promote the care and enjoyment of transport and industry collections.

We do this through projects, awareness raising activities and knowledge sharing events to encourage wider engagement with these collections across Scotland.

In 2011 we completed our successful Old Tools, New Uses project which created a master catalogue of Scottish typewriters, sewing machines and domestic tools. Educational resources for Schools are now available and several items were disposed of to our partner charities, Workaid and Tools for Self Reliance for reuse in Africa.

We also hold knowledge exchange events to celebrate the legacy of Steam Engines in Scotland, discuss heritage policy and early railways.

We take part in Doors Open Days to promote those sites with transport or industrial heritage.

Thinking of joining us?

Here are some reasons

why you should!

Working with others to develop opportunities to advance acquisition, care, development, research and interpretation of transport and industry collections in Scotland

A chance to tackle key issues facing stewardship and development of Scottish transport and industry collections

To promote, encourage and advance access to Scottish transport and industry collections. To support informed, efficient and confident decision making in the acquiring and long-term care of transport and industrial heritage across Scotland

Opportunities to network and learn more about Scotland's diverse transport and industrial collections

To access STICK's discussion forum, directory of expertise and information on collections

Who are we?

Established in 2006 and publicly launched in October 2007 we are an independent subject specialist network with members throughout Scotland from local authorities, universities, voluntary, national and independent museums.

Our membership is open to individuals and organisations with an interest in this field.

We believe transport and industry collections provide a vital insight into Scotland's social, industrial and economic history.

We aim to promote care and enjoyment of these collections.

Through research, stewardship and advocacy, STICK will encourage wider engagement with transport collections across Scotland.
